

GREAT MALVERN

Letterbox Survey

Michael Swift and Patrick Fallon July 2008

Letterbox Study Group

The main aims of the Group are to encourage research, preservation, restoration and awareness of letter boxes and the definitive description and documentation of their types and locations.

The Letter Box Study Group has the enviable position of being the only organisation in existence to have a comprehensive system for defining and numbering British letter boxes - and it is for this reason that the Group is recognised as the definitive authority on the subject, acknowledged by Royal Mail and the British Postal Museum & Archive.

As a member of the Group, everyone has the chance to make their own contributions to this highly respected body of knowledge.

In addition to publishing Newsletters, the Letter Box Listing and the newGuide to British Letter Boxes, and maintaining the records in the Directory, members further the aims of the Group in various ways. These include conducting surveys of all the boxes in specific postal areas and by offering talks to groups and organisations (further details of these can be obtained from the Publicity Officer, e-mail publicity@lbsg.org).

Sorry, the LBSG does not deal in redundant letter boxes and is unable to advise on obtaining redundant boxes.

Introduction

This is a short photographic record of post boxes in Great Malvern and their exact geographical location. Not every post box in the area has been recorded but we have photographed every box in the Malvern Conservation area and those of interest in Great Malvern outside the Conservation Area.

The reasoning behind this survey is to record part of our social history, some of which may well disappear in the future with the growth of new communication technologies. Most of us walk past post boxes without a second thought but they are a fascinating legacy of our past.

Post boxes were introduced into the United Kingdom in 1852 at the suggestion of Anthony Trollope the famous author, then a surveyor's clerk. None of the very early boxes survive in Malvern but we do have three Victorian fluted boxes, which date from about 1860 and several Victorian wall boxes.

Many famous Victorians and Edwardians lived in Malvern or came here to take the cure. It is fascinating to speculate how many letters from Darwin, Elgar, Bernard Shaw, Florence Nightingale and many others started their journey in a Malvern post box.

Although we have attempted to record all the interesting post boxes in Great Malvern, we may well have missed something. Please let the Malvern Civic Society know if you think there is a post box which should be included.
